Join us on November 11th to mark the 100th Anniversary of the birth of Thomas Berry

undefined

On Tuesday, November 11th at 7 p.m., Genesis Farm will celebrate the life and vision of Thomas Berry, and his major significance in our time. In particular, we want to acknowledge his influence on this northwestern corner of New Jersey's Ridge and Valley bioregion as well as on the history and mission of our farm.

Genesis Farm will host the gathering in the library. We will watch a film featuring the thoughts and contributions of Thomas Berry, have some time for reflection and conversation, and create a ceremony to give thanks for his life and for the special ways his work has touched us.

All of us who have lived, studied, or worked at Genesis Farm over the last thirty-five years carry a wellspring of gratitude for his thinking, writing, and generosity of spirit. Most especially, we are grateful for how he inspired us to attempt, in our own small way, to provide a cosmological perspective which connects our human identity and purpose within a single, sacred, and still emerging Universe.

Genesis Farm, in solidarity with so many people who love this Delaware River watershed, is committed to the ongoing protection and flourishing of its ridges and hills, its still-fertile fields, and its forests and waters. In this simple gathering to honor Thomas Berry, we will renew our efforts to be a voice for its future.

Please RSVP by phone or email by November 10th.
